Discussion Items/Business

Public Works Watershed Update and Water Rights Discussion

Chris gave a watershed planning update from Public Works. The Salmon Recovery Plan is currently being updated by the WRIA 1 Salmon Staff Team. The WRIA 1 Watershed Management Project is implementing the WRIA 1 Watershed Management Board's 2018-2023 Work Plan. One strategy in the work plan is Drainage Based Management Planning which is working in 3 pilot basins (Drayton Harbor, Bertrand-Schneider, and South Fork Nooksack River). The DBM Work Group has produced a preliminary list of action items for the South Fork watershed and will engage a broader community group to review in the near future. Public Utility District # 1 is leading the Regional Water Supply Planning strategy to identify current and future water sources and uses. The WRIA 1 Data Hub is another Board strategy and being developed to provide share data and interactive maps with watershed entities and will support a public interface in the future. Chris shared information about Whatcom County's recent acquisition along the Black Slough and two other pending acquisitions in the South Fork watershed. Chris also provided information regarding the impending water rights adjudication in the Nooksack basin and the Executive's proposed Solutions Table framework. Multiple consultants have been enlisted to support these efforts.

Meeting attendees also discussed a buy-protect-lease strategy to protect farmland. This would require working with a third party, as Whatcom County does not have the capability to manage and lease land. Examples of land trusts in Washington that do this type of work were given. These included South of the Sound Community Farm Land Trust, Washington Farmland Trust, as well as organizations in Wenatchee.

Staff CEP Presentation to Council in February

Becky went over the program update presentation to be given February 8th to County Council. Committee members provided feedback.

Review Draft Slides for Public Outreach

Becky shared the slide deck for public outreach to organizations. The committee made recommendations, including using the current slide deck as a handout and developing separate slides for a Power Point presentation. Jen has contacted the Whatcom County Association of Realtors to request presenting at one of their monthly meetings. The committee will discuss other organizations to present to at the next CEP oversight committee meeting.

New Members

Becky shared that two new committee members were appointed. She will reach out to give them an overview of the program before the February meeting.
