I just read where the crisis stabilization center is being renamed. As I previously said, the outcome of the SAC was predetermined. There was never any intention to put the new jail anywhere but in Irongate. All these other services are already in place. The county knows that and is just trying to get the people to confirm what the county government wants.

I certainly have not objected to looking into what services can be provided to those in need and finding a place, but I now more than before believe the intent was dishonestly motivated.
